 co-incident in the calling and coming of Rev. Graham to Belle Glade, it is when Rev. Phillips left the pastorate to go to Fort Lauderdale, he gave the Session a list of likely ministers, and included the name of Rev. Graham as a reference to secure information. Watson wrote the ministerial note as a reference to the surprise, Rev. Graham wrote back a rather favorable reply that it might possibly be arranged, and it was consummated.

Rev. Graham, if Sunday's sermon were a sample of his type of preaching, made a most favorable impression. He is a free speaker, able to move an audience at his will, and had enough homely humor in his addresses that retained the attention of all. He is a mighty plain speaker and holds nothing back against fighting Satan and present day evils.

The Presbyterian church has filled up the manse in a comfortable manner for the home of Mr. and Mrs. Graham, and they are now at home there.

The Session has announced that Sunday evening services will be held at the Manse in instead of the Ebenezer theatre until further notice, but other activities will be continued at the theatre.

With Christmas more than half way here, the streets are filled with a spirit of joy and a sense of peace. There is a fine spirit in the air and people are the spirit of peace.

convinced that anybody, no matter how good a worker, may become the victim of unemployment and that it is to the good of everyone concerned for provision to be made against this occurrence.

Those who draw unemployment compensation in Florida are not "handers." In order to be eligible for their payments it is mandatory for those out of jobs to file an application with the State Employment Service and to be "available for work" at all times. The Employment Service makes every effort to place the unemployed in jobs and insists that those on its list regularly report to the local office.

Neither the unemployed nor the citizenry as a whole is getting the benefit it should from our system of unemployment compensation under the present level of payments. An upward revision would be to the good of all concerned.

Chip Off the Old Block—Harold Lloyd, Jr., in his first motion picture role, gets into as many scrapes as his famous comedian father. The younger Lloyd has just completed the leading role in "The Dark," in which he is cast as a dry goods clerk who can't resist chasing fire engines. He tangles most frequently with the fire chief, played by Herbert Rawlinson, star of the silent screen, who here demands one of a series of explanations.

Consumers' Problems

By Mrs. M. E. Robinson

Mrs. Lee has done special research on this problem at Tuskegee Institute, Hampton Institute, Virginia, and Miami University, Oxford, Ohio.

Purchasing and Preparing Vitamin
The Food and Nutrition Board of National Research Council developed what is often called the "Yard Stick of Good Nutrition." This consists of tables of daily allowances of specific nutrients, protein, calcium, iron, vitamin A, riboflavin, and so on for men and women and girls, according to activity or occupation. Foods have been grouped now for many years according to body needs.

The study of the paradoxical of nutrition gives us a focus upon getting enough of everything required for best possible health and best possible growth. This study removes from our minds that the individual is getting enough of the right thing to eat just so long as he does not show unmistakable signs of any classical deficiency diseases, such as beriberi, scurvy or pellagra. As a matter of fact, severe cases of nutritional malnutrition among school children in recent years have taught us that borderline malnutrition, as well as mild specific deficiencies, are relatively common.

Our aspect of the problem of bridging the gap between current knowledge and its application is that of education. The best time to start learning about the food requirements of the body and how to meet them is in childhood and the logical place is the school where most children of the community are gathered together under supervision and in an atmosphere in which learning is the order of the day. Although education alone can not solve a problem which for many children has socio-economic aspects, it is generally true that poor nutrition is not confined to those whose incomes are limited. Learning to choose grains, and enriched bread and cereals, green and yellow vegetables, milk, eggs, and fruits, and through their school work to be convinced that such foods make important contributions towards their own good health. Each pupil must know that health education is nutrition education, and vice-versa.

The two go hand in hand. We must train away from liking only certain foods. Each household should know thoroughly the Seven Basic Foods and consider them when purchasing the family's food. Surely, John, or Sue will get the correct food in the school lunch room but that is only for one meal a day. Mother must cooperate by thoroughly educating her child to the purchasing values, vitamin content and general preservation of these vitamins in the process of food preparation and service. School Health Bureau advises us to observe personal growth and appearance which includes what happens to the eyes, complexion, hair, gums, mouth, skin, and parts of the body. They give the possible deficiency according to the signs prevalent as: hair, dry, coarse, brittle, lacking in lustre; the nose is vitamin A. Gums swollen, bleeding, spongy; or of abnormal color; the need is Ascorbic acid (Vitamin C, Citrus).

calories, all around poor unbalanced diet. Of course such things as acute or chronic illness or an endocrine imbalance which may interfere with assimilation, or utilization of essential food elements.

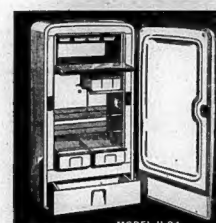

Convincing children of the importance of good nutrition and helping them to learn how to attain it requires teaching the public who are trained in nutrition and Basic Food requirements. The knowledge of how much one must or should eat to maintain health is knowledge that must be acquired. In the near future teachers will be required to include nutrition in their professional courses that they can be most efficient guides for the many children they teach daily. Malnutrition and its causes will be treated in our next article to better acquaint the public with what is needed to help this group overcome the scourge of this unfortunate malady.

OBSERVATIONS

in the city who did not desire that city interests be protected, and that offenders against the public law be brought to justice, and there are precesses of law which provide for both acts.

If local animals found more quail in the fields this fall than usual, part of it can be attributed to the fact that real sportsmen had picked up city bred covets of quail and removed them to the open fields.

A lodge member apprehended a friend by the name of Henry, thus, "Henry, we are having a raffle for a poor widow," said he. "Will you buy a ticket?" "None," said Henry, "my wife wouldn't let me keep her if I won her."

An elderly woman had been to hear her nephew preach for the first time, and she thought it was a poor sermon. Later, that day she asked, "James, why did you enter the ministry?" "Because I was called," he answered. "James, if the aunt solemnly, 'are you sure it wasn't some other noise you heard?"

The memorial services which were conducted in all Elks lodges on the first Sunday of each December, is a most beautiful and impressive one, including the memory of those who died in the building of the floral monument. This year, Belle Glade lodge lost four members by death, namely, Dr. William Buck, W. B. Granger and Archie Harris, and B. G. Smith.

Superintendent Howell Watkins, of the county school system, is most proud to announce that all the high schools of the county are now accredited schools, the latest to be so classified being Seacrest and Delray. Over in Hendry county the schools at Clewiston and LaBelle have also been given such classification.

The county school officials are not only plugging for better instruction and building up the school educational rating, and as funds become available are building modern school plants to properly house the 15,000 or more children who attend the schools during the year. In every third educational Palm Beach county ranks high in school ratings.

In the near future Belle Glade is due for a fine new high school structure, and Pahokee will be given expansion in the present facilities. South Bay people are looking forward when they can have new buildings for both the white and colored schools.

Nature has a way of inflicting heavy damages, and likewise has great powers of recuperation, especially in this rich Glades area. Our growing crops were given a severe frost and freezing blast, but now two weeks later, the picture of such losses, has almost passed from view. The last week end saw the end of the salvaging of beans which had escaped frost damage. The present cold spell has aided the more hearty crops and celery which now enter the shipping stage.

With workless days, the need for food for the tables, each day we can note larger numbers of the negroes going out on fishing trips to the canals. What they carry home in the way of fish helps supply the table food.

The former Fifth street colored school building is disappearing and it will be completely razed within the coming week. It was a landmark in the colored section of our city, but it answered its purpose over a long period of time. The new Lake Shore school is a long advance over the Fifth street school. The colored people are making every endeavor to show appreciation for this school, and are mighty thankful for it.

If you are looking for information as to how severe the recent freeze was in these parts, just go up to the local air field and see how the former luxurious green grass has been burned to a deep and seared brown.

The Glades during the past twelve years has always been a hot football center, and the Pahokee and Belle Glade schools have turned out some nifty star players. One might not deem that football would be of special benefit to the players for mental improvement or a possible livelihood for the future. Yet, when we look what Tom Boynton, H. B. Baxter, Kenneth Dell, Calvin Peacock did on collegiate teams where they had been given educational scholarships, we know that they did profit by their athletic prowess. Dell and Peacock are both teachers and coaches in our county schools.

Carroll McDonald a local star is at the University of Florida and Billy Jo Leathers at Rollins, and both boys made their mark this season. Peacock, Baxter and Dell were all former stars on the Rollins college football team and they all served in military capacities during the past world war.

There are many foundations in the United States, where huge riches are used for educational and philanthropic purposes and science research. Among all these the Elks Foundation, is the most unique, in that it is in no wise interrelated with other public or charitable funds. Its funds are kept fluid, so that assistance may quickly be provided when and where needed. The states each have their own projects which they maintain, and Florida's big institution is the Harry-Anna Home for Crippled children at Unithilla, where around 100 children get hospital and medical care.

Some months ago, a cat came out of the grass near my home, and he looked as if he had come through a threshing machine. His head and neck were twisted, his hind legs hardly pushed him along, and he sure was a mess. Tender care by my Missus, has brought him out into a beautiful big cat. However, we discovered that he had lost the sense of hearing and smelling, but otherwise is a pretty scacious feline.

And kiddies, I have watched him in his daily habits. He always says good morning when admitted to the home in the morning. He goes to his corner for his food, and if nothing is there, he immediately makes demand for his mackerel or sardines. When what he does do, he goes over and washes his face and paws and slicks up his fur, and then quietly lies down for a nap. How many of you kids, do that? From a purely "outside" cat he has become very much of an "indoor" pet. We have learned to observe that he also has strong, sharp claws. He seems to be perfectly content with the home that he picked out in a time of emergency.

The high pine trees, which follow the canal of the Glades for 50 miles or more, are to the attention of the State Highway Tree trimming crew. By announcing this fact, the department, has followed suggestions by resolutions of Glades civic clubs, that such work be done, as a safety measure, and to prevent injury and agrees to the section in storm periods. The department has not as yet fully determined its plan of work on the project, as to the extent of decapitation.

Florida State Making Tampa Bowl By Season's First Grid Showing

Florida State University of Tallahassee, the baby of the state's university system, hit the jackpot in its third season of intercollegiate football, gaining a berth in the Shrine Cigar Bowl game Jan. 2 against the powerful Wolford College Terriers of Spartanburg, S.C.

In two years under Coach Don Vetter, the Seminoles have won 15, lost two and tied none. Producing a winning team at Tallahassee received favor of Florida football fans, and the Seminoles have picked up a big following at the expense of their cousins at Gainesville who have Mathis-Roe.

been involved in coaching controversies for the last two decades without a winner.

Florida State University was organized in 1847 replacing Florida State College For Women which had been a girls' school since 1865. Vetter took over the coaching reins in 1948 when the Seminoles became a charter member of the new Dixie Conference, and his teams have been winning ever since.

In his first year at Florida State Vetter's team won seven games and lost only one. This year his Seminoles won eight games and lost one.

Vetter uses his own version of the cockeyed T formation originated by Bo McMillan, his coach at Indiana.

During the 1949 season the Seminoles defeated Whiting Field, Mississippi College, Eastline College, Sewanee, Stetson University, Millaps, University of Tampa and Troy State, FSU was beaten by Livingston (Ala) State, which also has been invited to participate in a bowl game.
